Town urged to support First Response

(UPDATE This story was updated at 3.20pm, Friday, August 5, at the request of St John)

The Ōmārama community, holiday homeowners, and other regular visitors to Ōmārama are being urged to attend this month's public forum to discuss the ongoing issues the town's first response is having with being turned out to all medical emergencies.

Medical call-outs make up about half of the Ōmārama Volunteer Fire Brigade and First Response calls each year.

Ōmārama's population swells to more than treble the size at holiday times as holiday houses and camping grounds fill.

Ōmārama Co-Response [First Response] Trust spokesperson Craig Dawson is urging the community to come out in force and support its first response team "in their desire to help save lives and provide better outcomes for people in need of urgent medical assistance".

Residents' Association of Ōmārama chairman Lindsay Purvis reiterated Mr Dawson's comments.

The association was hosting the forum because of the community's concerns that St John's present practice was seriously compromising outcomes for those in the area requiring urgent assistance, he said.

"Representatives of St John and Fenz [Fire and Emergency New Zealand] are coming to the forum so people need to come and have their say.

"It is a very important issue for our community – even those who are only here on weekends, because you never know when an emergency might happen," Mr Purvis said.

The Ōmārama First Response unit wants to be called to all medical emergencies because they are the closest service which can provide medical assistance.

The nearest St John ambulance is stationed in Twizel some 20 minutes away, with the next closest being Kurow, about 40 minutes away. At present, because of staffing issues, some are waiting anything from an hour-and-a-half to four hours for an ambulance.

It is important to note the decision to call out the First Response is not made by ambulance field staff on the ground but by the St John call centre.

When the First Response was first set up in 1997 and under a 'local agreement' it was on the understanding it would be called to all emergency medical calls. However, at various stages since St John have reverted to its national model and agreement with Fenz, and have not called the unit to those calls deemed to be non-life threatening.

Because triaging a medical emergency by phone can be inaccurate, 111 calls have often found to be much more serious than was first able to be conveyed by the patient, and long wait times have caused unnecessary suffering and angst.

[UPDATE FROM ST JOHN: REQUEST FOR CORRECTION

We're particularly concerned this article lacks fairness, balance and accuracy with regard to the statement on 111 call triaging. This has been written as if it is fact with no attribution and no examples to back it up and we have serious reservations that not only is the statement inaccurate, it is alarming and could cause unnecessary angst for the community.

To claim that triaging by phone 'can be inaccurate and 111 calls have often found to be much more serious than was first able to be conveyed by the patient', is simply untrue and misleading. There is no balance to the story because you never sought a response from St John leading to an incredibly unbalanced, bias article.

Had you sought a response from St John, you would have been provided with the information explaining that St John Ambulance uses an internationally recognised triage system and NZ Ambulance Communication Centres are accredited centres of excellence (ACE) rewarded in recognition of organisational excellence in public safety. ACE accreditation is achieved through rigorous and measurable set of globally recognised best practises.

St John Emergency Medical Dispatchers (who answer 111 calls) are regularly audited and 100% of our random 111 calls are audited by an external agency. We also have internal quality improvement officers who review additional 111 calls.

St John would like to request removal of the statement that references 111 triaging from your article immediately and a correction be published.]

Residents are frustrated because their community-funded and fully-equipped unit is literally just around the corner from any local incident and can not only provide emergency medical care but has access to the St John clinical desk for advice and can radio the oncoming ambulance with relevant updates.

Individuals have stepped forward with their own examples of how St John's present call allocation system has failed them. [See Ōmārama Gazette July Issue]

As a result, the Resident's Association decided to host a facilitated public forum with the partner agencies present to hear concerns and to share relevant information with a goal of creating an action plan to remedy identified issues.

Representatives from St John New Zealand and Fire and Emergency New Zealand have been invited to speak.

Waitaki MP Jacqui Dean is unable to attend because of a prior engagement but is sending a statement to be read at the forum.

Official guests include Waitaki District mayor Gary Kircher and representatives from Federated Farmers and Rural Women New Zealand.

The forum will be independently facilitated by Mathew Bayliss, Meridian Energy senior manager

The forum is at 11am, Saturday, August 20, 2022, at the Ōmārama Memorial Hall with a cup of tea provided on arrival from 10.30am.

Flood event - time for a debrief?

When is an emergency not an emergency?

That is the question on everyone's minds as they as they grapple with the aftermath of the Ahuriri River and Ōmārama Stream flood.

No question, there is widespread anger over the Waitaki District Council response to the event and its aftermath, and there is resentment over issues the community had raised many times prior to the flood which were not resolved and made matters worse.

There has been complaints council communication with the township and residents since the flood has been either non-existent, negligible or late.

Strong feelings have been voiced that the council relies too heavily on volunteers to do its job.

And it's not just the council in the firing line.

The weedy and overgrown state of the lower Ōmārama Stream prior to the flood is considered a contributing factor to causing a clogged and overloaded waterway.

And it is the source of long-term frustration for the residents alongside the stream who are forced to deal with that ethereal and notoriously duck-shoving group – 'ECanLinzDocandWDC' – to try to make any difference.

People want to be heard and for things to change.

People are talking 'rates revolt'.

People are angry.

FIRSTLY, WHY WASN'T A STATE OF EMERGENCY CALLED?

It was an extreme weather event for the town, the Ōmārama Stream not only broke its banks but forced its way out of its course, chose Omarama Avenue as a new channel, and poured itself into the camping ground and nearby properties with a force such that it destroyed whatever was in its path.

Further down the line residents Murray and Sharon Stuart's caravan was lifted and carried more than the length of a rugby field to lodge in trees at the very far reaches of their property.

In all, at least 100 people were evacuated – 60 from the camping ground plus residents, including families, from homes along the avenue from the Ōmārama Stream Bridge to Ōmārama Hot Tubs.

The evacuations were voluntary and carried out by Ōmārama's sole charge policeman with the help of Fenz Ōmārama Fire brigade volunteers. A welfare centre, staffed by those same volunteers, was set up at the Ōmārama Hall in the night and early morning, and helped about 30 displaced people.

The town water supply was compromised.

Residents woke to impassable roads, bridge washouts and debris – branches, roots, gravel, general detritus - backed up in properties and strewn for miles, garages and basements which had been inundated leaving tidemarks at about ¾ metre off the ground, and sodden carpets and furniture.

The hardest hit businesses were, first and foremost, the Top 10 Holiday Park, followed closely by Ōmārama Hot Tubs, but other smaller and significant businesses along the path of the flood waters have also been calling their insurance companies.

SO, WHAT IS THE CRITERIA FOR CALLING A STATE OF LOCAL EMERGENCY?

Under the Civil Defence Emergency Management Act 2002 section 4 (a) an emergency “is the result of any happening, whether natural or otherwise, including, without limitation, any explosion, earthquake, eruption, tsunami, land movement, flood, storm, tornado, cyclone, serious fire, leakage or spillage of any dangerous gas or substance, technological failure, infestation, plague, epidemic, failure of or disruption to an emergency service or a lifeline utility, or actual or imminent attack or warlike act; and

(b) causes or may cause loss of life or injury or illness or distress or in any way endangers the safety of the public or property in New Zealand or any part of New Zealand;”

Yes, this event ticks those two boxes.

But the decision makers also must consider that the event; “cannot be dealt with by emergency services, or otherwise requires a significant and co-ordinated response under this Act.”

And, in this event, emergency services and police were able to manage the situation.

Declaring a state of local emergency would have given powers to the Waitaki Emergency Operations Centre that would not usually be available to “protect the safety of the public or property”, and that are also “designed” to help recover from an emergency”.

This covers a multitude of services that can be put in place because of the emergency – accommodation, welfare, waste disposal, sewerage and so on. Because of language used in council media releases from the Operations Centre there was some confusion over whether it had actually called a “state of local emergency”.

However, in an interview with Radio New Zealand’s Kim Hill on Tuesday morning, Waitaki Mayor Gary Kircher said that, while the emergency management team were “certainly looking after things and so on, “...We haven’t activated...we haven’t declared an emergency because we are coping with things.”

On Monday, in an email the Ōmārama Gazette asked Waitaki District Council chief executive Alex Parmley and Civil Defence emergency management officer Ewen Graham why a civil defence emergency had not been called.

“The overall feeling of the community is, although the sole charge police officer and volunteers managed the event well, this would have been of great assistance for the subsequent decisions which had to be made during the ‘recovery’ – clean-up – phase,” the email said.

As well, the Gazette asked Mr Parmley and Mr Graham if they had considered a meeting of council staff, Environment Canterbury, emergency services and members of the community to ensure future plans and protocols were fit for purpose and worked as they should.

Mr Parmley and Mr Graham did not respond ahead of deadline. However, the response will be published once it is received.

[The Omarama Gazette has asked for all information pertaining to the decision made whether or not to call a state of emergency under an Official Information Act request.]

Before making its decision, the emergency response group must get the advice of others including Police and Fenz. In light of that, the Ōmārama Gazette has also requested official information held by Ōmārama Police about the events of Monday night and Tuesday morning concerning the event in Ōmārama and its surrounds. The council is part of the Otago Civil Defence Emergency Management Group, and its Civil Defence Emergency Management is legislated to provide a “coordinated and integrated” approach to the way significant risks and hazards are managed in the district, “with a focus on 4R’s”: Reduction, Readiness, Response as well as the Recovery phase.

ANDY AND EMMA MOORE’S STORY

The couple arrived at the Ōmārama Hot Tubs complex on Tuesday to find the septic tank overflowing and groundwater coming up through it.

The tank had to be emptied so repairs could be made.

The first time it was emptied Andy said he did not know “what to do with it”, or who to contact about the problem.

The first tanker load was trucked to Twizel to the Mackenzie District Council’s facility and the Moores paid for it to be emptied there.

As the second load was about to go, they realised that, along with the cost, there could be additional problems because the waste was being emptied in another district.

So, Andy arranged to meet with Ahuriri Community Board member Ross Menzies and a SouthRoads’ representative and, after consultation by phone with the council, it was agreed the waste could be taken to the Ōmārama Wastewater plant for disposal.

However, the tanker was turned around at the gates by an employee who told Andy he had just been informed he could not dump the waste at the sewage treatment plant after all.

This was followed up by a phone call confirming the council position.

“Because I don’t pay rates to use the pond, I am not allowed to use the pond.”

Andy was in “disbelief”.

“Under the circumstances, they could have helped another person in a shitty situation. I thought that we could help each other, but no.”

Consequently, four tanker loads at 12,500 litres a time were trucked to Twizel and payment made to the Mackenzie District Council for the use of its facility.

“Yes, insurance will cover it.” But the point was, along with there being no communication, and no advice, the council decision was inflexible and meanspirited given the circumstances, Andy said.

Apart from help from Ōmārama Police and the community there was no help, it was “frustrating”.

“We felt completely on our own, no communication, no advice, not a phone call, and we had to do what we had to do.”

Andy and Emma both hope the response to the emergency will be carefully looked at and reviewed to make sure necessary improvements are made.

On Monday, the Ōmārama Gazette emailed Waitaki District Council senior operations engineer David Inwood to ask for an explanation of the decision regarding the septic tank.

“I understand there were issues regarding the clearing of septic tanks in the flooded Ōmārama Hot Tubs complex and that, even though it would have aided recovery from an extreme event, the Hot Tubs was not permitted to empty septic tank and grey water at the nearby council-managed Ōmārama Treatment plant but instead had to truck waste to Twizel. Would you please give the council perspective on this?" the email asked.

Mr Inwood did not to respond ahead of publication. However, the response will be published once it is received.

THE COUNCIL RESPONSE:

"The recent weather events across the Waitaki district caused several obstacles for water services. During this time, there were direct access issues to the Omarama Treatment Plant and Council's Health and Safety protocols could have become compromised. Every owner of septic and holding tanks need to use an accredited contractor to take waste water to Ōamaru's treatment plant. This protocol is not uncommon in many councils throughout NZ as discharges direct to pond systems can become problematic with changes in BOD levels and other variances which could in turn breach resource consent."

Heritage Gateway Hotel general manager Megan Talarico said the hotel put up about 60 guests in 20 rooms after they were evacuated from the Ōmārama Top 10 Holiday Park, with the Holiday Park passing on the accommodation payments they had received from the guests to compensate the hotel for the first night.

Many stayed two nights because of the road closures.

In light of the circumstances they were charged a minimum rate for the second night.

"We weren't going to leave them stranded," Megan said.

However, despite accommodating evacuees the hotel received no direct notification from the council of the advice to boil water.

"When a 'boil water' notice comes through the hotel buys bottled water to supply guests for things like brushing teeth."

Whether the council ought to have provided tankers of potable water while Ōmārama was under the week-long advisory as some have suggested was arguable.

"Had it happened during peak season it would have caused more issues," Megan said.

- continued over

She praised the actions of the emergency services and townspeople.

"Everyone in town came together and helped.

"The evacuees were just happy to be safe and dry, some loved their extended stay so much they have promised to return."

THE COUNCIL RESPONSE

Marty Pacey, Water Manager

"The deployment of a water tanker was considered at the beginning of the event, however roads were closed, so the establishment of one was not possible. Once flood waters receded and access was restored, only one member of the public requested the establishment of a water tanker. Past experience with deployment of water tankers has shown very little use by the public in these situations."

THE SOAK PITS/MUD TANKS

In the early hours of the flooding on Monday night soak pits through the town were quickly overwhelmed causing flooding which threatened properties.

Because contractors refused to attend that night, the volunteer Fire Brigade was called to pump out the soak pit in Totara Peak Cres as the water began to encroach on two properties in the street.

The community has long requested that the effectiveness of the soak pits be addressed, with the most recent requests forwarded to the council after heavy rain in January of this year.

- continued over

The Ōmārama Gazette emailed council assets operations manager Josh Rendell on Monday to ask why this had not been addressed and to ask why, and given it was a holiday period with accommodation houses and holiday homes in use, the township was not provided with tankers of potable water for drinking and meal preparation during that time.

Mr Rendell did not respond ahead of publication.

However, his response will be published once it is received.

THE COUNCIL RESPONSE

Joshua Rendell, Assets Operations Manager

"The intensity of the events experienced this year has been significant. The ability of some of council's infrastructure to cope with the scale of the events has been tested and found wanting. Council will be undertaking a review of some of its stormwater infrastructure, including soak pits with a view to restoring capacity to those systems."

SHOWING A LITTLE KINDNESS

In all of this, the one time the strangle of red tape was loosened came because of the efforts of council solid waste manager Steve Clarke.

Ōmārama Residents' Association chairman Lindsay Purvis' asked the council to waive fees on the disposal of flood debris at the council-owned transfer station.

Initially, the council's response was a categorical 'no'.

But Mr Clarke went further and contacted WasteCo which manages the transfer stations to ask if it was willing to step up, which it was.

The Ōmārama Gazette also emailed Mr Clarke on Monday to get the council's perspective on this. This is Mr Clarke's reply, received yesterday [Tuesday].

"The recent weather events in Waitaki caused flooding resulting in debris in Ōmārama. A request came through from the Ōmārama Residents' group asking to provide free waste disposal for this event. Council advised that we would be setting a precedent by offering free dumping and advised that dumping fees are claimable through insurance.

“However, we understand these are difficult times and offered to put extra bins in Ōmārama.

“Council also approached WasteCo on Ōmārama's behalf to see if they would be keen to support Ōmārama, which they were. They dropped off a bin which locals utilised for related waste.”

The Gazette will be following up on all the email questions it has sent to the council.

On the Sunday following the flood, Waitaki MP Jacqui Dean held an informal meeting with some residents.

Subsequently, Mrs Dean sent this message to all Ōmārama residents:

“I hope that by the time this goes to print, Ōmārama residents have had a chance to take a breath and get some decent rest after the big flooding clean-up.

“Having seen the damage done to farmland, local businesses and backyards, I have every sympathy for what you've been through. I would also like to thank those who've taken time out to talk with me about what they experienced and what lies ahead.

“From the discussions I've had, it's clear that some aspects of the emergency response worked well, and some aspects did not.

“Some questioned why a ‘state of emergency’ wasn't called. There also seems to be a disconnect between how authorities view the response and how some local people feel about what took place.

“It would be nigh on impossible for all aspects of an emergency response to be handled perfectly, with decisions having to be made fast and with competing priorities.

“But I do think it's important to take stock and review how things went from all sides so that improvements can be made.

“A review proved useful after the Ōhau fires, and I suspect it would be useful here too.

“I would hope that ECan, the Waitaki District Council, Fire and Emergency and members of the community could sit down together to ensure plans and protocols are fit for purpose and work as they should.”

Thank you from Erwin and Natalie

Erwin and I would like to thank everyone in the community for their support and kindness during this tough time for us!

Although it has been absolutely heart-breaking to see the devastation caused by the flood and we know it'll be a long road to recovery, we feel incredibly blessed to be part of such a supportive community! Thank you!

More thank yous

Thank you from the Wall family

Please pass on our sincere appreciation to the community of Ōmārama for their kindness and generosity over the past couple of days.

We were quickly evacuated from a family cabin at the Top 10 as flood waters began to flow and we were promptly provided with a lovely hotel room to stay in until the roads opened again.

The short, unexpected 'blip' we experienced on our holiday has only given us great memories and a desire to return again some day to experience all your region has to offer.

All the best, the Wall family.

Thank you from Tony Fryer

Good morning

I just want to send a huge shout out and thank you to your Ōmārama community.

We are stranded travellers who were evacuated from the Top 10 last night and have been put up across the road at the hotel. The crew at the Top 10 are amazing and our thoughts are with them, and the crew at the hotel are also amazing for putting us up until 'not sure when'.

So a massive shout out to the emergency services and your community.

Also a massive shout out and thank you to this Facebook page which has good updates with what's going on. Fingers crossed one of the roads out will open today preferably the Twizel one. Keep up the good updates.

Congratulations Arabella, from all of us

"Arabella (11), a pupil at Omarama School, was awarded a St John Super Saver Bravery Award earlier this week for her actions after her mum fell from a horse earlier this year."

A message for flood-affected campers from the Ōmārama Gliding Club

The Omarama Airfield Company has made the glider trailer park available for anyone who needs to park equipment until the situation in Omarama is restored.

The glider trailer park is the paddock south of the hangars – turn right through the gate by the Pink Glider Café and you will see the long line of glider trailers parked side by side.

It is important that you hook into the steel cable which runs the length of the paddock, as it is quite exposed, and this stops the trailers from being blown around in strong wind conditions.

There is a second cable which runs south from the gate down the fence line to the west of the paddock.

Please avoid driving on the Omarama model aircraft club landing strip which is the green prepared area towards the middle of the paddock, about 50m south of the trailers.

Parking elsewhere on the airfield is restricted because it is an operational area and parking in the campground is also not available.

Surrounded by love

It was the mark of the man that many friends travelled to Ōmārama to give him a fitting send-off last month.

The Ōmārama Memorial Hall was packed for the celebration of the life of long-time resident Colin Herd.

Close mates Peter Reinke, who gave the eulogy, and Lindsay Purvis and Paul Meester all paid tribute to a life well-lived with humour and vibrancy, illustrated with tall tales of schoolboy pranks and mischief who grew to be a true 'Southern Man'. In a special message to Colin's wife Sharon, Lindsay reminded her she would have the continued love and support of her community through the days ahead. Sharon, in return thanked the Omarama community for all they had done for the couple during Colin's illness.

Jan and Julz big day out

Going 'up, up and away' in a beautiful balloon may have been on Jan's bucket list but it certainly wasn't even on Julz's wanna do list.

But what are good friends for but to share the ups and downs of life.

Our two girls – Jan Perriam and Julie Dyson – left good old terra firma last month shooting straight up “from zero to just over 1800m” in what felt like seconds from a paddock in Methven, courtesy of Balloon company <https://www.adventureballoonsnz.com/>.

“It was Bl*%y scary,” Julz said.

“When we got to 6,000ft, I said , that’s high enough thanks. Jan was stuck to the spot for at least 10 minutes.”

“Yes, I was, I was absolutely petrified,” Jan said.

“It was just so quick, zero to 6300ft, oh my goodness!”

They were then taken back down to about 900m just under cloud level which was a little less angst-inducing.

“It’s the weirdest feeling...and then somebody moves,” Julz said

Once Julz got used to it she started bouncing around, “with everybody telling me off”.

“Once we went down below the clouds...It was so peaceful,” Jan said

It was beautiful, absolutely stunning...just silence, and you could hear the cows mooing.”

It was amazing watching the balloon fill with gas, “and then there’s the wicker basket ... and yeah, it pays not to think about things too much”, Jan said.

She’s keen to give ballooning another go and has pencilled in another trip, hopefully at the Hororata Balloon festival.

And while Julz says it was great, she may not be tagging along this time. It was still not bucket list material, so, no, she won’t be doing it again, she said.

The Community Reports

Hi all,

Here we are into the last month of Winter. I hope you are all recovering from the rough weather we had in the middle of July. If you were unfortunate enough to have water around your place it is a good idea to make sure any debris is cleaned up from around drains and any place it may stop any water flow if it were to happen again.

Some kitchen safety hints, if you have a fat fire smother it with a lid, damp tea towel or a chopping board and leave to cool down, don't ever try to carry it outside this could result in spilling and spreading the fire and also serious burns.

If there is an oven fire close the door turn off the oven and isolate the heat source if electric turn off at the wall if gas isolate at the easiest valve to get to which could be at the regulator and dial 111.

Thank you

Wowee what a ride the last days have been! We hope all our followers in the Waitaki are all safe and dry after the snow, nor'west winds, then crazy rain. We sure did pick the best few days of the last month to have our Hill Billy Hunt.

Our club wants to say a HUGE thank you to those who came out on Friday for the Quiz Night. It was such a fun night, and the Wrinkly Rams kept us all toasty warm, well fed and hydrated over the evening.

Despite the snow and chilly days, there was still successful hunting done over the weekend. Our Sunday weigh in saw some brilliant catches and creations.

Over two events our club has raised a whopping $6000. This is just fantastic, and getting to do so while having a good time is even better.

We could not have been so successful without our long standing sponsorship from Central Otago Hunting and Fishing.

If you're in Cromwell please call in and support this awesome store. We love being able to say our major sponsor has been so since the very first Hunt. Such a wicked achievement, and we can't wait to continue this partnership for Hill Billy Hunt 2023!

The Wrinkly Rams- Thank you for opening specially for us on Friday evening. Everyone of your team is welcoming, the food AMAZING, and your venue just superb, and then for staying open Sunday for prize giving- Thank you. To all our other sponsors- there were so many local and wider regions, island and country sponsors. Without you all providing products or services, our event would not have been what it was. Thank you, so very much.

And to YOU- our Community. Thanks for braving the chilly weather to come spend a Friday testing your general knowledge, and then spending the rest of the weekend hunting off the list.

Our Lucky Winners were The Clod Throwers - Mike and Jack Doree, and Sam and Poppy Radford - on 139 Points.

Well done, we loved your moose head wire Sculpture, and you sure did find an Ugly Stag! Same weekend next year, lock it in now.

We are excited to be planning our Rodeo for December 28, 2022. We hope to see you there.

OMARAMA RODEO CLUB wants to say
Thank You

Your Generous support of our Quiz night and Hill Billy Hunt, helped our club raise over $6000

WAITAKI REGIONAL EVENTS FUND VIRTUAL WORKSHOP – AUGUST 17 2022

The Waitaki Events Advisory Board to host a virtual events workshop on Wednesday August 17, 2022, prior to the next funding round opening in early October 2022.

Prior to the opening of the second funding round of the Waitaki Regional Events Fund in early October 2022, the Waitaki Events Advisory Board is hosting a virtual workshop for prospective applicants.

'The line-up of speakers includes renowned events promotor Arthur Klap.

The day will cover aspects required in submitting a successful application to the fund', Advisory chairperson Jan Kennedy said.

'Key aspects for a successful application are the need to meet all the criteria, such as a marketing plan which focuses on bringing visitors from outside of the region, and showing how the event can encourage a longer stay.' Dunedin events marketer Amanda Dire, will share her insights on preparing a successful marketing plan.

Local accountant and sports advocate Adair Craik will cover off producing a clear and comprehensive event budget and financial plan, aiming to display how an event can move towards financial sustainability.

Also presenting at the workshop is Megan Williams, Tourism Industry Aotearoa (TIA) Sustainability manager, who will be sharing tips on how events improve their impact on the environment and their carbon footprint.

'We are aiming to provide event operators with beneficial knowledge to ensure submissions to the fund are both complete and to the standard required to access this government fund. We really want to get the funds out the door and see events grow across the region', Mrs Kennedy said.

The virtual workshop is Wednesday, August 17, 2022, starting at 10am and ending at 4pm.

Event organisers are encouraged to RSVP before 8 August 2022 to: marketing@waitakinz.com the link to the virtual workshop will be issued on receipt of the RSVP.

Event organisers are welcome to submit their draft marketing plans to the Waitaki Events Advisor, Tammy Jackman prior to the event for feedback. Email: tammy.jackman@dcc.govt.nz Tourism Waitaki received a total fund pool of $183,000 as a part of the government, MBIE, Regional Events Fund. The fund also covers capability for administering the fund.

The first round of the fund opened in October 2021. One event was successful in receiving funds.

Criteria includes (but is not limited to):

- Driving increased visitation
- Bringing measurable economic benefit to the region
- Complimenting a regional calendar of events that's well-balanced to create year round stimulation

Information about the REF including the application form can be found on the Tourism Waitaki website: waitakinz.com

TOURISMWAITAKI

The Waitaki District Council Draft District Plan engagement period ends on August 31.

The planning team has so far held drop-in sessions at Palmerston, Hampden, Moeraki, Weston, Kakanui, Ōmārama, and Duntroon.

For your feedback to be used to inform the next stage of the District Plan process the council asks you submit your feedback using the specified channels.

This includes the online feedback form, which can be found at www.waitaki.govt.nz/haveyoursay.

You can also send an email with your feedback to planreview@waitaki.govt.nz. Alternatively, you can also post or drop off a hard copy form.

Copies of the engagement document and forms are available from Council offices and Waitaki District Libraries.

For more information, visit the website www.waitaki.govt.nz/district-plan-review.

THE MACKENZIE BASIN'S OSTLER FAULT

One of New Zealand's most spectacular active fault

Ongoing compression between the Australian and Pacific tectonic plates is uplifting the Southern Alps. Part of the compression emerges on the Ostler Fault. Extending ~65 km from near Omarama to the Lake Pukaki valley, the Ostler is the Waitaki District's most active geological fault, experiencing a large ground-rupturing earthquake on average once every 3,500 years. The fault breakouts preserved across the glacial-age plains of the Ahuriri and Ohau valleys are world-class examples of fault landforms.

A presentation by David Barrell

David is a geologist with GNS Science, a government-owned earth science research institute. Based in Dunedin, David has worked on the geology and landforms of the Waitaki District for over 25 years. He has particular interest in landscape-shaping processes, including effects of glaciation and tectonic movements on fault lines.

A trip to the winterless north

- story and photos by Michelle Kitchen

Queen's Birthday Sunday was D-day for our long trek north to Russell. We - rather Neville was working for Tony and Amanda Chapman at their Russell Top 10 Motor Camp.

We had carefully planned our overnight stops with the first leg coinciding with the Interislander ferry on Tuesday 7 June.

The first leg was two nights with our son and partner in Rolleston via Timaru to say hello and goodbye to family.

Tuesday morning the big haul up to Picton to check-in by 12.30 pm. Remembering we are in the company stretch Limo (AKA the Toyota Hi Ace van) the going would be much slower.

The van was packed to the roof mainly with the relocation of our son's stuff left over from the days when he lived at home or used our place as a storage unit between flats. Yay, finally the last of it was going to his new home.

All was going good as we finally closed the van door late Saturday afternoon.

Then came the call from our son – "We have tested positive for Covid, can you please get us some groceries when you call past"

Bugger - plan B for accommodation in Christchurch.

My niece very kindly put us up for the night. It was good to catch up.

In hindsight driving from Rolleston to Picton to meet a 12.30pm final check-in was a big ask. Monday night was at a lovely beach front motel in Kaikoura and dinner at

The Pier Hotel watching the sun set. The next morning we woke to the most stunning sunrise that only happens when the sun rises straight out of the sea, glad we stayed the night. With pressure off for driving time we were pleased the road wasn't busy considering this was Queens Birthday Monday.

One thing I quickly learnt was that coffee and sandwiches can be few and far between even on SH1 and almost impossible after 3pm. Thank goodness for fuel stops and takeaway teas.

The crossing was good, I had taken my travel calm ginger working on the theory that if you don't take it, it will be rough and if you do take it, it will be calm.

The next challenge was to get through a wet dark Wellington to stay with family. With only Google Maps on my phone we made it in one hit. I wish Siri would stop telling you to go north when you can't see where north is because it's dark.

Transmission Gully really is an engineering master piece. Something you would see in Europe winding its way around the Alps.

I was looking forward to the Desert Rd. Unfortunately, it was a wet howling Nor' west day so no stopping to take in the splendour of Mt Ruapehu.

Taupo dawned a nice day as we had a big leg driving north of Auckland. By this time I was starting to get over the bouncing around in the jump seat in the van.

Once we hit the Thermal Explorer Hwy it was plan sailing all the way through Auckland. We could have even pushed the speed up to 110 km on the Waikato Expressway. It's clear to see where all our fuel tax money has gone over years. No wonder NZTA have nothing left in their coffers for our end of the country, the motorways certainly move traffic quickly and efficiently.

We caught our breath in Omaha for the night, by this time I had ditched the merino and ventured out in a T-Shirt.

One of my missions was to eat fresh local fish when I saw it on a menu. This night it was grilled flounder, I had forgotten how wonderful this simple dish is.

With the Northern Express road works starting at the Johnstone's Hill Tunnel heading all the way to Warkworth, the going was slow in places. This new piece of road is curtesy of Shane Jones's Provincial Growth Fund.

The best way for vehicles into Russell is via the Opua - Okiato ferry, roughly a 10 minute trip then another 10 minutes' drive into Russell. A passenger ferry also runs from Russell to Paihia.

Russell is beautiful, gorgeous big old wooden villas and lush tropical foliage and flowers.

However, I was not prepared for the relentless rain, no problem to dump 20 mm of rain per hour.

I guess you cannot have all that lush foliage and beautiful tropical flowers unless it is wet, humid and warm.

The bird song is relentless, mainly Tui, Weka and Miner birds during the day and North Island Brown Kiwi calling at night, they are all around in the bush behind the camp.

As the days turned into weeks, we enjoyed exploring the far north, discovered the wonderful Old Packhouse Market in Kerikeri.

The mussel fritters were to die for, we found a new love for Northland Wines and who knew they grew Lady Finger Bananas.

The camp has bananas, avocados and the most enormous lime tree. My heart bleeds seeing all the citrus fall on the ground up north.

Cape Reinga is definitely worth the trip especially as we got to see Manawatāwhi/ Three Kings Islands, made all the better with a pit stop on the way at a wonderful roadside food truck. Neville swears by the Paua Pie and, of course, who can resist a real fruit ice cream. We stocked up on local Avocado oil, Manuka Honey and 10 Avocados for $5.

I flew home after four weeks and got caught up in the school holiday/cancelled flights debacle that plagued Air New Zealand.

I found myself in transit in Auckland with a cancelled flight to Christchurch and no seats available for the next three days.

The queue at the help desk stretched half the length of the domestic terminal; no hope they would be able to help me.

Realising I needed to act quickly as thousands of travellers were in the same boat I managed to book a hotel room nearby. My darling husband drove four hours arriving at midnight. The next day we drove to Tauranga to stay with friends, I eventually got a direct flight to Christchurch arriving two days later than planned. Neville drove back to Russell to work.

I still haven't braved the three hours plus wait time to talk to Air New Zealand to get some compensation for my expenses.

Neville will be home this week to a colder but generally drier climate. The only way we like it. No cockroaches to worry about, no worrying about planning your work around a torrential downpour.

The winterless north has suffered from sub-tropical rain this year, most unusual according to the locals.

We did enjoy the experience of working and living up north, it was great to catch up with Tony and Amanda but at the end of the day I am an inland girl, the hair goes too curly on the coast.

Back in the day - Ahuriri River Flood 1878

- excerpt from Munros Merinos and Matagourie

Mrs Eion Woods has produced this photo which is 101 years old and is of the worst flood of the Waitaki River and its contributories in its history. This is the photo of the Ahuriri River in flood in 1878 looking down from Omarama to the Chain Hills. The mountain at the back is Totara Peak. The Omarama village was no doubt under water and the camera would be south of the village.

Trail Adventures is a family owned and operated business on the Alps 2 Ocean Cycle Trail. We pride ourselves on doing our best to ensure each one of our customers gets a quality, personalised experience.

For the 2022/2023 season (October 2022 to April 2023), we are continuing to expand and are wanting to hire casual staff to provide transfers of people and luggage.

Ideally you will currently hold a P endorsement. This isn't a deal breaker however you must be prepared to get one.

If you can provide first-rate hospitality, enjoy sharing our incredible countryside with others, are flexible in terms of hours and enjoy working in a team-focused environment, please get in touch with us for more specific details.
